March Oklahoma City HR Society Meeting Features EEOC Speaker

March 11, 2003 - Oklahoma City – The Oklahoma City Human Resource Society’s (OCHRS) March meeting will focus on responding to employee charges of discrimination. The featured speaker will be Donald Stevens, enforcement officer with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC). Mr. Stevens will give a front line investigator’s guided tour of EEOC investigations.

“This training is key to HR professionals as we focus our efforts on building diverse and inclusive organizations and removing barriers that prevent diversity and inclusion,” said Gregory Davis, President of OCHRS. “I encourage HR professionals to join OCHRS and attend this important presentation.”

The meeting will be held at 11:30am on Wednesday March 26, 2003. It will be held at the Embassy Suites at 1815 South Meridian in Oklahoma City. The cost is $18.00 for OCHRS members and $25.00 for non-members. Lunch is included in the cost. Attendees should RSVP by 3:00pm Monday, March 24. To RSVP or for more information, please visit the OCHRS website at www.ochrs.org.

The Oklahoma City Human Resource Society is an organization dedicated to the development of Human Resource Professionals in the Oklahoma City Area. OCHRS offers programs to keep HR professionals on the cutting edge of management practices and business trends affecting the labor force. Individuals interested in joining OCHRS may learn more and download an application at www.ochrs.org. Applicants to OCHRS must be members of the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), the national Human Resource professional organization. Information about SHRM membership is available at www.shrm.org.
